Higashi Ayase Park is in an inverted “U” shape with a walking path connecting the lots dotting the area from Ayase Station, where Chiyoda and Joban Lines cross. There used to be rice paddies here, but through a land readjustment project, it was turned into a park. The park stretches about two kilometers long. Along the walking path on the west side of the park flows a stream that forms the source of Hanahata River that makes use of what was once irrigation water. Exercise playground equipment and a gateball court are also located there. A variety of exercise facilities are located at the north side, surrounded by greenery. As a sports oriented park, the park is equipped with a baseball field, tennis court, martial arts hall, heated pool, as well as other facilities. It is gaining much attention as a park for people of all ages to enjoy.
