It was later put under the administration of the army and U.S. armed forces and ultimately returned in 1974. It was reconstructed under a plan for the use of the site of Chofu Airfield.

The Musashino forest stretches out from around the park, creating beautiful scenery of forest green.

Conifer Garden

It is located immediately to the left of the entrance plaza. Many conifers are planted in this garden with preexisting weeping willows and Himalayan cedars in the background. Conifers are all foreign trees, but many grow well in the Kanto area.

Furusato hill

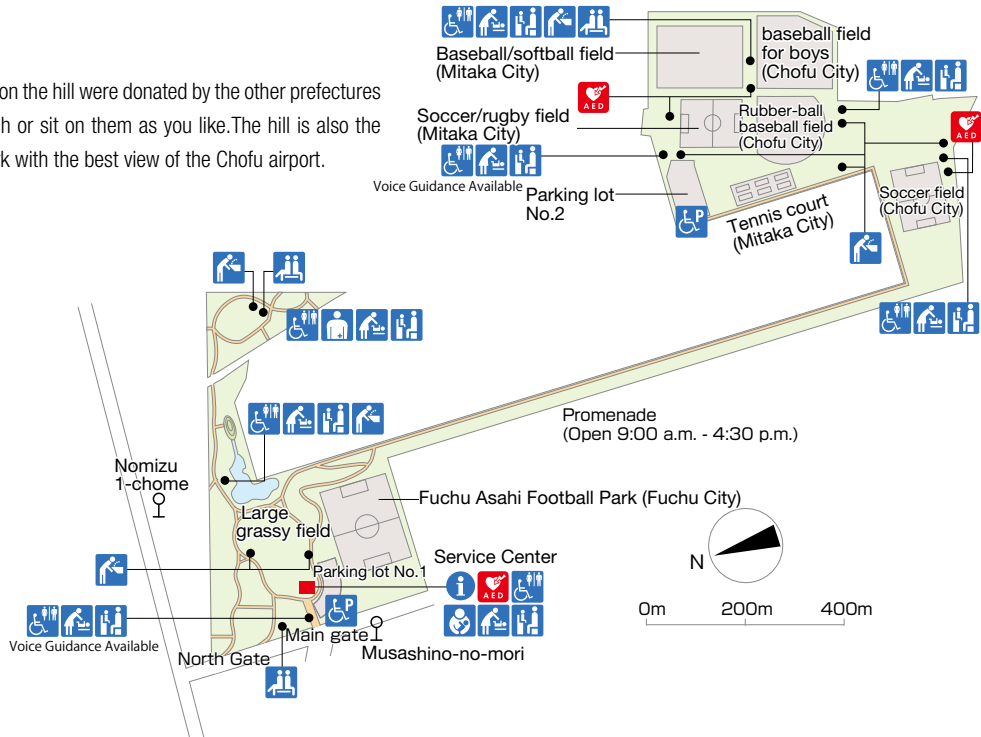

The stones displayed on the hill were donated by the other prefectures in Japan. You can touch or sit on them as you like. The hill is also the highest point in the park with the best view of the Chofu airport.

War relics

Bunkers remain in the park today as relics of war. These were fortified hangers to protect aircraft from enemy bombardment. About 30 were constructed around Chofu Airfield. Two are situated in the park.
