This park is situated on the north slope of the Tama Hills that reach up to 100 meters tall. From the observation platform on Yaen ridge road, one can see the mountains of Okutama as well as central Hachioji through which Asagawa River flows. The trains running on the Chuo and Keio lines look like models from the distance.

Groves of trees that cover the whole park are mainly sawtooth oak and konara oak, but yama-zakura and storax are mixed among them. The flowers broom through early spring to summer, constantly changing the scenery.

A streamside park path leads to Naganuma Station on the Keio Line, connecting the base of the hill with the ridgeline. The stream view is full of variation, being sometimes a wide val-
