Rokusen Park is a new park, just opened in April 2006. It offers an entrance plaza, grass field, flowerbeds, and flowing water.

Located at the center of Higashikurume City, this park has been planned as a base of greenery in the northern Tama region.

Good agricultural land is still left in the plan area, providing precious open space in an urban environment. That space will continue to be preserved as a park. And park development will be ongoing from a long-term perspective so it will help restore the original Musashino scenery and serve as an evacuation center in times of disaster.

Water basin

Groundwater is used for the water basin, and that then goes back to the ground.

Rainwater in the park is all returned to the ground through seepage trenches and wells, helping feed the Minamisawa spring.
